Introducing Your Horses to the OptiMizer[®]

There is a learning curve for horses to understand and be comfortable with optimal hay consumption with the OptiMizer. Here are some tips to help through this transition:

Put the OptiMizer in a good place in the paddock where your horses already feel comfortable. Consider a place where your horses normally stand. Make sure there is plenty of room around the OptiMizer (e.g. at least 10 feet from any fence or structure) so the horses can walk around safely and not feel squeezed.

Introduce grazing hay through the net. Make it easy for your horses to succeed in getting some hay! Just put one bale of hay in the OptiMizer, remove the twine, and fluff the hay up. Close the net and lock it in place. Pull some tufts of hay through various locations of the net to help them get started.

If your horses are not getting enough hay or appear frustrated, sprinkle a loose flake of hay on the top of the OptiMizer. Provide unrestricted hay in another location.

During the first few weeks, we recommend checking the condition of the net every day. It is possible that a horse could bite through the net as they are learning how to consume hay optimally. (This is not an indication that the material is failing, or is substandard, because no hay net is indestructible.) In the unlikely event you spot a hole forming, repair it with the string provided on this card. Rest assured that your horses will ignore the net completely once they become accustomed to it.

The OptiMizer was designed to maximize safety for horses and their caregivers. However, like all horse products, please use caution when using the OptiMizer. It is possible for halters, blankets, or horse shoes to get entangled with hay netting. It is possible that horses could injure themselves on the OptiMizer.

The owners and employees of Wishing Well Services Ltd. are not responsible for injury or damage of any kind that may result from using the OptiMizer.
